

From Kenji Taguma of Nichi Bei Foundation:

We've received tremendous response for our Japanese American Community Resource Guide thus far, with many wanting to purchase extra copies for their friends and family. One professor of ethnic studies at Cal State East Bay wants 60 copies for the two sections of her "Concentration Camps USA" course.

HERE is the video on the history and evolution of the Nichi Bei.

We do not have the digital edition of the Community Resource Guide yet, but that's in the plan. HERE is the promotional video for the JA Community Resource Guide.

Sam Nakahira was referred to me by a friend, as we were looking for comics. I connected with her, only to find that she actually took a class with my niece at West Torrance High School. After we published her first comic, Mark Shigenaga, one of our photographers, informed me that Sam is his cousin's daughter. Small world. She's been great, incorporating research and Japanese American history in her work, and she will continue to submit a comic a month; her first comic was based upon two videos reports we produced on Benkyodo and Yasukochi's Sweet Stop. HERE is an interview with Sam from our 2021 Nichi Bei Day of Giving Web-a-thon.